WACO, TEXAS, SEPTEMBER 3, 1888.

A Spanish astronomer thinks he has seen it snow on the moon.

Sacramento City, Cal., has voted to send to Florida for 5000 orange trees and plant them in the streets for shade trees.

The Board of Education of the city of Philadelphia has exhausted the appropriation granted by the city council, and on Monday next, when the public schools open, there will be at least 10,000 children who will not be able to gain admittance.

A little girl named Sallie McAdams has been astonishing the people of Crawford, Neb., by the plucky way in which she tames vicious horses. No matter how wild the horse may be she sticks to him until he is conquered, and the most expert cowboys in the region acknowledge that they cannot beat her.

There is great excitement in Minneapolis Minn., over the discovery of a secret organization of a political nature which is anti-Catholic. Clubs are said to exist in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth wards of the city. A special from that city says: "Almost all classes are a unit in the denunciation of the organization, and all prophesy political death to all who are connected with it."

Evils are sometimes mixed with blessings. Just when yellow fever is increasing at Jacksonville both in numbers of victims and intensity of action, a cyclone comes along and sweeps with a purifying breath over the afflicted city bearing upon its fiery wings millions of the squirming little animalcule which breathed into the system produce yellow fever, besides bracing up the sick for a renewed struggle with the disease.

The Philadelphia Record of Wednesday says: "The new ocean line steamship City of Birmingham is discharging at Queen street wharf a cargo of 2100 tons of Southern pig iron forwarded from Savannah. The shipment is the product of the Birmingham and Chattanooga furnaces, and was landed at Savannah in 121 cars. The freight rates from Birmingham and Chattanooga to Queen street wharf are less than $3.20 per ton. The iron is eagerly sought after by stove manufacturers."

Jean Francois Steyaert, who surrendered himself in this city to the Belgian consul as the murderer of a merchant named VanDewalle, in Belgium, last March, was sent back to Belgium from New York on Wednesday by the consul in that city, to whom the case was referred from New Orleans. When asked if he knew the penalty he would have to suffer for his crime, he said he did. It was imprisonment for life, as capital punishment is not in vogue in Belgium.

The survey for the Congo railroad past the 235 miles of cataracts are approaching completion, and there is no doubt that within the next two or three years the toilsome journey to Stanley pool, nearly three weeks long, that has sapped the energies of not a few travelers, may be comfortably made in a day. The time is coming when a trip to Central Africa will not involve a big caravan and thousands of dollars of expenses. Any one who hankers after a taste of life in the central regions of the dark continent will have only to pack his gripsack and buy his ticket, and steam will waft him to the once mysterious regions which the pioneers nearly perished to reach.

There will be a grand railroad celebration at San Angelo on the 17th of September, to which the whole state of Texas is invited. The railroad will carry all visitors the entire way.

Yellow Fever Record
Washington, Sept. 2.—The department of the state has not yet received any information confirming the reported rejection of the Chinese treaty.

The official bulletin from Jacksonville for the twenty-four hours ending 6 p. m., Sept. 2. New cases, 24; deaths 2; total number of cases to date 258, total number of deaths to date 34.

A moderate cyclone passed over Jacksonville this afternoon. After the vortex went by there was a gale from the southeast, accompanied by loud thunder, keen lightning and a heavy rainfall continuing several hours, clearing the atmosphere wonderfully and lowering the temperature, washing the surface of the streets perfectly clean as well as carrying several hundred barrels of lime which had been scattered abroad, into the river. The effect of the storm said a leading Cuban physician to-day will probably be excellent and will tend to lessen materially infection, but will be bad on the sick.

Died on the Gallows Blaspheming

San Francisco, Sept. 1.—George W. Cox was hanged at San Andrest today for the murder of his son-in-law Henry G. Cook, last November. The execution took place in the jail yard at 10:39 o'clock. In the presence of a few spectators. Cox awaited his approaching fate with indifference. When told by the minister that it was time for him to turn over to the Saviour, he replied:

"Yes, I'll turn to the devil."

Asked by Sheriff Thorne what time he preferred the execution to take place, Cox said:

"At any time between 10 and 12; it don't make a d—m bit of difference to me."

Cox ascended the scaffold firmly, and when the rope was adjusted about his neck, he said laughingly:

"Don't smother me, for Christ's sake!"

The drop fell at 10:39, and rope cut the carotid artery and all but the cervical muscles, which caused a sound like escaping steam. The condemned man died without the slightest pain.

The murder of Cook by Cox was so unprovoked that many thought him crazy.

Hanged by an Idiot Sister.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 1.—George Denning and his sister Abbie, both idiots living in Sampson County, near Newton Grove, had frequent quarrels. Abbie became furious with George; being the stronger of the two, said she would punish him. She procured a rope, put it around his neck, and then put over one of the joists in the house and swung him up. A neighbor went to the house just in time to see the unfortunate brother die, while the sister chattering and laughing, stood near. The parents of the idiots had been trying to get them in the asylum for some time past, but failed to do so.

Baylar University opens on the 17th. Students are beginning to arrive already. Dr. Burleson who has made an extensive canvass of the state, says that prospects were never brighter for a large attendance for the coming session.

First-Class.

The grocery store of W. S. Heard, Austin street, is one of the largest and best in the city. The leading feature of the store is the sale of only first-class goods, and one hazards nothing in saying that an adulterated article is not to be found in the establishment. For fastidious persons, who look closely to the quality of the food they eat as a means of preserving health, this grocery store is to be commended, while it abounds in the finer delicacies for invalids and people of cultured tastes. The stock is a large and varied one, and prices are very reasonable, and the News has the greatest pleasure in commending this house to the consideration of its readers, a large number of whom are already customers there.

A Big Drive.

20 pounds Dried Apples for $1.00.

A Change in Facial Type.

Frederick Barnard, the illustrator, surprised me a little the other day when he said: "You Americans are not a bit like the English in your appearance. In the course of a century or so you've changed from the English type altogether. The voices of your women have grown loud and shrill and the men have got darker faces and keener eyes. I've got so now that I can tell the New Yorker pretty well by his eyes wherever I find him. They are sharp eyes and are set near together, as though their owner had brought them close to his nose by poking them organ into very narrow places where it was necessary to see at the same time. You look like a lot of ferrets. Then the eyebrows, instead of going right straight across the face, slope downward at the outer edge and come rather close together above the nose. That not only makes you look shrewd, but it makes you look bored and tired and dragged out, as I suspect most of you are. A great many of you look like actors. Boston people look somewhat different from New Yorkers, as they ought to, for they live in a more Christian town than this. Your eternal jumping and rushing in this city make me tired, as the boys say."

This change in facial type must have struck all who have studied old portraits and given any thought to the matter. The revolutionary fathers were not the haggard, lean featured men who tear up and down Wall street and Broadway; they had stability of person, large clear eyes and rosy jowls, looked as if they ate and slept enough and had not invented malaria. They had that calm of good health and ostrich digestion that makes the English admirable to the eyes of the pining dude, who, although he can't quite imitate their appearance, can wear their quizzing glasses, pot hats and checks. As modes of life change there is no doubt that people make some facial conformity to them.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Brief Chapter on Relishes.

The relishes are of two classes. First, those which depend mainly on one or more pungent substances, such as pepper, mustard, ginger, horseradish, vinegar, cinnamon and the various spices. These are combined with some one or more—generally with several—of the following vegetables as a base: tomatoes, usually green; onions, cabbage, cucumbers, peas, peaches, currants, berries, grapes.

Secondly, those which depend mainly on sugar, combined with the juices of various fruits, or with the pulp, as in the case of marmalade.

Now the question arises, are these and similar relishes conducive to health?

A normal, vigorous appetite needs no such aid. It is sufficient of itself. The lower animals need nothing of the kind. The cow's green grass, the horse's dry hay, and the dog's bone with a little meat on it, are doubtless eaten with a relish that our pampered stomachs know little of.

Unfortunately, all people have not high health. Some are in a feeble condition, with little or no appetite, and yet their recovery depends mainly on the food they take. In such cases some simple relish is not merely greatly desirable, it is necessary.

Many persons, in this driving age, come to their meals with little appetite. A sensible appetite quickens and increases the gastric secretions. In such cases, therefore, some pungent relish is really helpful. Probably even the strongest is not injurious, if used with moderation; but relishes are greatly pernicious if used to encourage overeating, or to cause one to eat when the stomach is already exhausted from previous repelion.—Youth's Companion.

The Beggars of Russia.

An illustration of the results of indiscriminate charity is furnished by facts reported from Russia. It seems that whole villages have resolved themselves into orders of mendicants. They stay at home until they have reaped their harvest, and then all start out on a begging tour. They are divided systematically into guides of ten to twenty persons each. These scatter here and there, begging through the towns, and gather at stated intervals to divide their gains and consult further operations. The women take along their children to excite pity, and the old draw attention to their decrepitude. The cash returns are said to be exceedingly large, and from the bread gathered they not only feed themselves, but fatten their horses. In this manner several months of each year are spent. The moral results of this sort of life are, of course, lamentable. Every trace of self respect goes, and a degeneracy of sentiment is created that obliterates character, ambition and honor. This is true of all mendicancy, under all circumstances.—Globe-Democrat.
